Classical DISC style overview

The behaviors of David and Jennifer displayed on this page are a combination of the influence of each of the four major DISC factors. Typically, each person will have one or two (most often) of the DISC factors that are prominently displayed. What follows is a description of the classic workplace patterns along with some insights into how David and Jennifer typically functions in their day-to-day interpersonal dynamics. Their style is a baseline indicator that likely will be adapted by David and Jennifer based upon the interpersonal dynamic of their relationship.

David Jones's DISC style: Explorer

Explorer Style Overview

Explorers display opposing directions in their behaviors. There is a desire for results and goal achievement AND a competing desire for those results to be perfect. Explorers shift between aggression and sensitivity, the desire for immediate results vs. consideration of alternatives. They often make routine decisions quickly but may need to exercise caution for bigger ones. They are change agents who will want the space and flexibility to explore by retesting and revisiting their conclusions over time. They can be seen as emotionally distant and sometimes surprisingly direct.

- Emotional characteristic: May shift between being aggressive or restrained.
- Goals: Achieving dominance and reaching unique goals.
- How others are valued: Do others meet their standards? Can others present unique ideas that are move things forward both effectively and accurately?
- Influences group: Will establish an observable focus on building structures to help the group achieve objectives and accomplish goals.
- Value to the organization: Will initiate or adjust tactics and plans.
- "Watch-out-for": Can become overly critical, blunt with others and sometime look down at other peoples ideas.
- When under pressure: Can become bored with routine tasks. Does not respond well to micro-management. Can attempt to dominate situations and trailblaze.
- Fears: Situations without personal influence; will struggle with personal poor performance.

Jennifer Carson's DISC style: Coach

Coach Style Overview

Coaches are adept at solving "people problems." They are seen as warm, empathetic and insightful. They like to form extended personal relationships and often develop a reputation for unobtrusive, contributory efforts when working with others. They can become too lenient with marginal contributors and tend to be too mild when issuing corrections, directions and expectations.

- Emotional characteristic: Wants to be seen as warm and open by others.
- Goals: Building personal connections and positive feelings.
- How others are valued: Favorable recognition of others; finds the basic decency in them.
- Influences group: Through personal relationships and being open to others' ideas, problems and needs.
- Value to the organization: Will bring stability to group efforts with predictable actions and will possess good listening skills.
- "Watch-out-for": Can become too tolerant and may avoid needed direct confrontations.
- When under pressure: Can become too accommodating, trusting and sharing too much with others.
- Fears: Having to pressure others or being seen or blamed as the source of pain or problems by others.

Strengths of David versus strengths of Jennifer

David and Jennifer likely display the strengths below rather consistently. For the most part, these qualities tend to enhance their interpersonal effectiveness. The big question is – how can David & Jennifer best utilize their strengths when working together?

David's strengths:

- You tend to be a strong agent of change.
- You consider many alternatives, theories, and possibilities in your problem-solving approach.
- You are a very creative thinker and innovator.
- You maintain a strong, businesslike focus on problems, ideas, and solutions.
- You have the ability to use your imagination and take calculated risks in developing new solutions to problems.
- You put hard work and heavy effort into finding the best possible answers to questions or problems.

- You are able to negotiate conflicts into win-win situations.
- You are very people-oriented and, as a result, are able to talk with new people very easily in small groups or in large audiences.
- You are able to build positive relationships with internal and external stakeholders.
- You demonstrate a high degree of patience in working with others.
- You possess a positive sense of humor and never make jokes at the expense of others.

Work style tendencies

Work Style Preferences provide useful insights as David and Jennifer work together on a team or project. They are the talents and tendencies they each bring to the job. How do their work style tendencies mesh or clash?

David's work style tendencies:

- You tend not to force your own ideas on others with edicts, but rather by offering considered suggestions.
- You show a high degree of persistence in working on projects, especially over the long haul.
- You tend to be an excellent "teacher" to peers on the team, at all levels of the organization.
- On the job, you have a strong need to be patient, polite, and create an environment of good-will for internal and external stakeholders.
- You are perceived by others on the team as a good listener.
- At work, you tend to have a "long fuse," and are not easily angered, although you may take some of the anger home to vent.
- You are optimistic and motivated to be an excellent team player, able to defer your ego when working with others who may prefer having more control of the situation.

Jennifer's work style tendencies:

- On the job, you tend to say "yes" more often than "no," when asked to help out with a colleague's project or problem.
- At work, you tend to have a "long fuse," and are not easily angered, although you may take some of the anger home to vent.
- You tend not to force your own ideas on others with edicts, but rather by offering considered suggestions.
- You tend to be an excellent "teacher" to peers on the team, at all levels of the organization.
- You meet new people easily and prefer networking with others rather than working in solitary conditions.
- You are perceived by others on the team as a good listener.
- Your empathetic nature and sensitivity toward people may lead others to seek you out as a coach or counselor, or ask to assist them with a personal or team problem.

Motivations – Ideal environments

Everybody is motivated; however, they are motivated for their own reasons, not somebody else's reasons. By understanding each other's motivations, David and Jennifer can create an environment where they are most likely to be able to be self-motivated and motivate each other.

David tends to be most effective in environments that provide:

- Support and appreciation of your individual efforts.
- Clear responsibility and lines of authority to avoid confusion or overlapping initiatives.
- A balance between some stable, predictable work activities and some variety and change on a regular basis.
- A work culture that takes pride in the systems, processes, and people working behind the scenes.
- A participatory manager or board with whom a democratic relationship has been established.
- A job culture where there is little hostility, confrontation, anger, or pressure.
- Specialized assignments that also involve working and communicating with a variety of people.

Jennifer tends to be most effective in environments that provide:

- A balance between some stable, predictable work activities and some variety and change on a regular basis.
- Clear responsibility and lines of authority to avoid confusion or overlapping initiatives.
- A work culture that allows for your natural interest in helping others learn and grow professionally.
- A participatory manager or board with whom a democratic relationship has been established.
- Specialized assignments that also involve working and communicating with a variety of people.
- Support and appreciation of your individual efforts.
- A favorable working climate containing positive attitudes and optimistic spirit.

Communication plans

The following suggestions can help David and Jennifer understand and be aware of each other's unique communication preferences. To use this information effectively, share it with each other, as well as with co-workers, and discuss your communication preferences to form a more productive, less stressful working relationship.

When communicating with David, DO:

- Be prepared to handle some objections.
- Beware of indecision, and be sure to keep the "data gate" open for more information.
- Remember these three rules: Be brief, be bright, and be gone.
- Give her time to verify the issues and potential outcomes.
- Stick to business matters only -- small talk or charm won't be appreciated.
- Be specific about what's needed, and who is going to do it.
- When you agree, support the ideas and potential results, rather than supporting the person responsible for the results.

When communicating with David, DON'T:

- Forget or lose things necessary for the meeting or project.
- Confuse or distract her from the issues at hand.
- Provide incomplete or unclear directions or instructions.
- Fail to follow through. If you say you're going to do something, do it.
- Use unreliable evidence or testimonials.
- Leave things up in the air, or decide by chance.
- Whine about all of the work you have to do.

When communicating with Jennifer, DO:

- Be certain to conclude the communication with some modes of action and specific next steps for all involved.
- Be candid, open, and patient.
- Ask for his input regarding people and specific assignments.
- Show sincere interest in him as a person.
- Plan to talk about things that support his dreams and goals.
- Provide assurances about his input and decisions.
- Present your ideas and opinions in a non-threatening way.

When communicating with Jennifer, DON'T:

- Talk down to him.
- Be impersonal or judgmental.
- Be vague or ambiguous.
- Be overly task-oriented.
- Leave the idea or plan without backup support.
- Let the discussion with him get caught in dreams too much, otherwise you'll lose time.
- Offer assurances and guarantees you can't fulfill.

Struggles of David versus struggles of Jennifer

Everyone has possible struggles, limitations or weaknesses. Oftentimes, it is simply an overextension of their strengths that may become a weakness. David's and Jennifer's struggles are listed below. It's best if they read through their list and identify the one or two struggles with which they are having the most difficulty. Then, they can look back at their strengths page and see if they have a strength that might help a struggle?

David's struggles:

- You may like to work under pressure, and thus you put others under unwelcome pressure sometimes.
- You tend to be unconcerned about social poise and may appear somewhat abrupt or aloof toward others without being aware of this. You could build more bridges by showing more sensitivity to their feelings.
- You may need some improvement on your communication skills. It is important to share ideas with others on the team, allowing them to be a "sounding board" for your thoughts.
- You could use some assistance in prioritizing issues.
- Others may have difficulty keeping up with your opposing desires for quick, yet perfect results.
- You may sulk or withdraw if not given attention and/or credit for ideas submitted.
- You may tend to work in rapid bursts, followed by periods of quiet reflection. This style may be confusing to others who might prefer a more consistent approach.

Jennifer's struggles:

- You may hesitate to correct or discipline those who report to you, for fear of offending someone.
- You may have difficulty with quick decision making because of your need to consider the "people side" of all issues.
- You may need some coaching in time management; for instance, in setting more ambitious deadlines.
- You may be a bit of a grudge-holder toward those who offer criticism.
- You may be rather indirect in providing instructions, because you don't want to impose your will on others.
- You may tend to take constructive criticism personally, possibly losing focus as to how it relates to the task.
- You may show less emphasis on productivity and more emphasis on the "people side" of a project.
